Modern State

- A "modern state" is a state in which power and authority are centralized and exercised by an independent administration organization over a clearly defined territory.

Max Weber

Functions of modern state

- ✓ State should strive to keep its people secure and safe
- ✓ State should ensure that its borders are sealed and protected
- ✓ Market needs to be integrated into the society by a well-knit macroeconomic structure
- ✓ 'Citizen first' should be the motto of all the activities of the State
- ✓ Promotion of the welfare of its people
- ✓ State engages itself as a provider of essential services.

Modern state focuses on three main functions:

1. Security and defence
2. Economic
3. Provision of essential services

Government

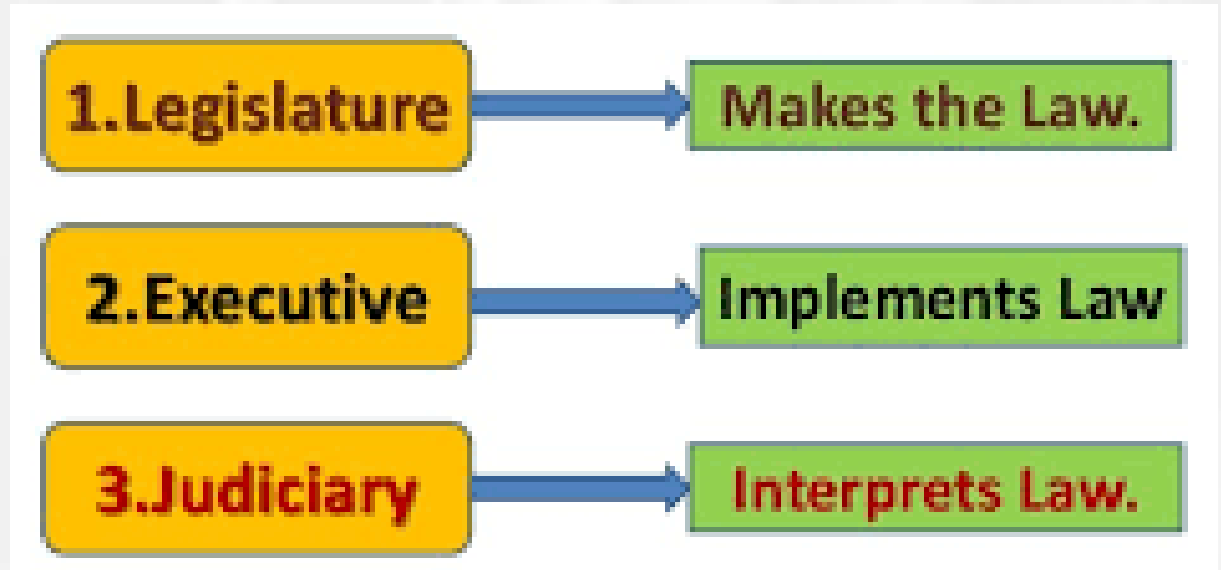

- A government is the means by which a state is run and is composed of officials who have the authority to govern.
- Government power can be derived from various sources, including from the people or from the wealthy and powerful.
- Governments are usually divided into various ministries or departments that manage the many tasks that governments are expected to perform today.

Organs of government

- The three organs of the government are:

1. Legislature
2. Judiciary
3. Executive

- In order for a democracy to function effectively, all of its organs must effectively create and carry out laws.
- Laws are created by the legislature, are carried out by the executive, and are then applied by the judiciary in specific cases where a law has been broken.
- Democracy is stable and unified when each of its organs is working in harmony with the others.

Organs of the Government and their Functions

Legislature

- The primary duty of the Legislature is to create the rules and regulations that all citizens must abide by.
- It also passes laws and examines the administration and resolutions further.
- The fact that the legislature is also in charge of ensuring that the other two branches of government run smoothly makes it absolutely necessary.
- Legislature is regarded as the first of the three organs because, without it, laws cannot be executed or applied.

Executive

- The second organ Executive, which comprises the,
 - Prime Minister,
 - President/ Governor,
 - Chief Ministers, and
 - Council of Ministers at the Union/State level, along with the administration responsible for enforcing laws made by the legislature.
- The Executive helps implement the laws formed by the legislature and enforces the will of the government.
- Executive is the administrative head of the state.

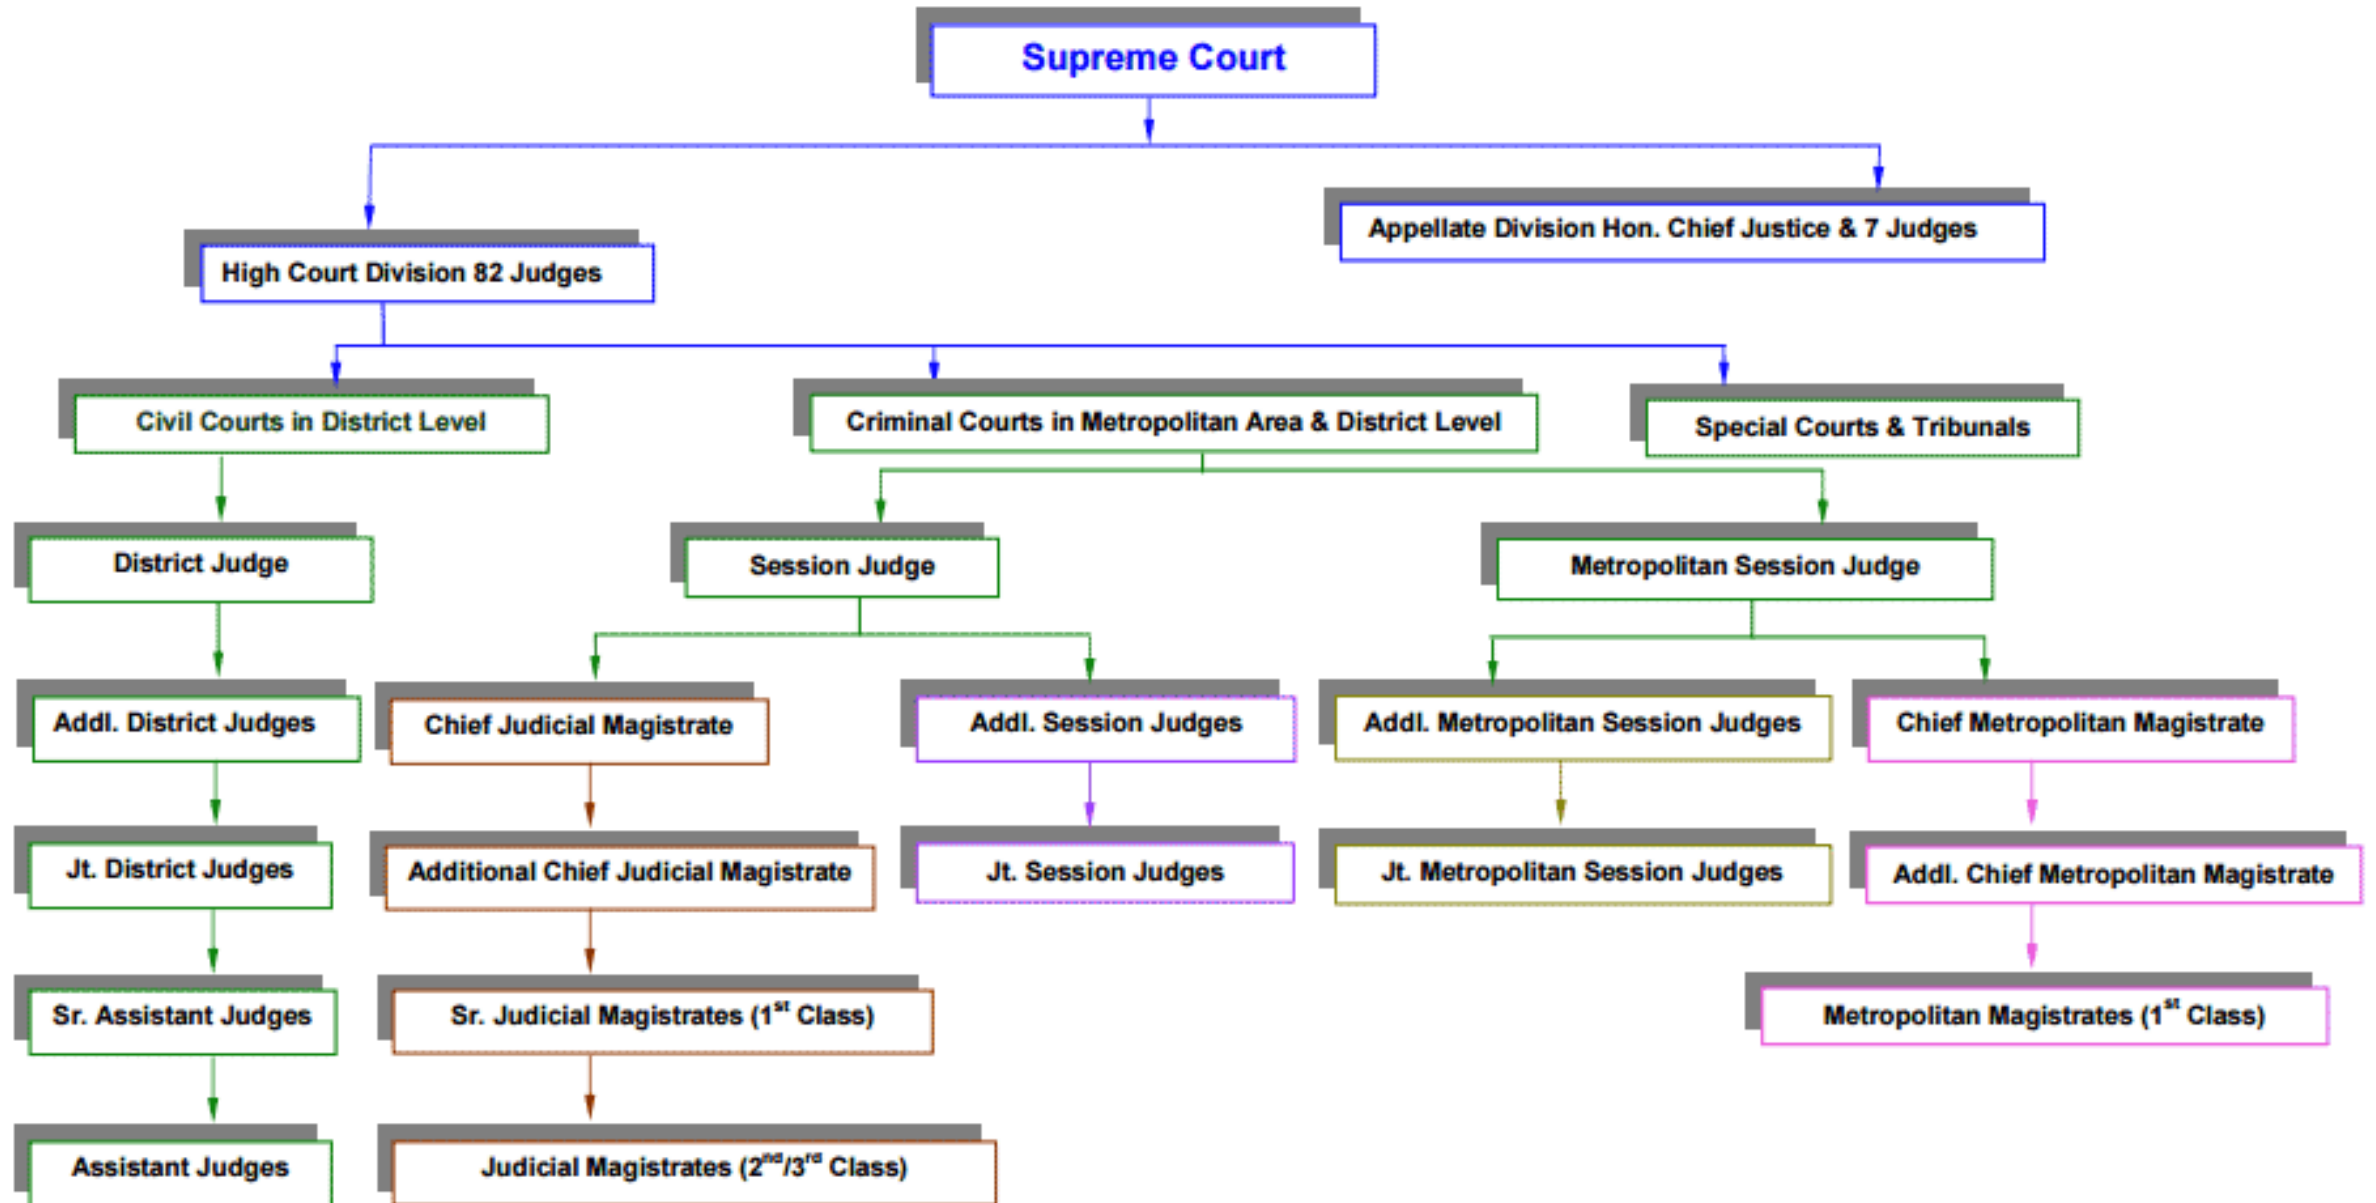

Judiciary

- The community courts are at the bottom of the Judiciary, with the Supreme Court of at the top.
- The Judiciary also consists of the high courts, district courts, and lower courts.
- To ensure that the populace receives justice, it is the judiciary's responsibility to interpret the law and adjudicate disputes.
- The judiciary is frequently referred to as the "guardian of the constitution" or the "watchdog of democracy."

Democracy

Come from the two Greek words: demos= people, and kratos= power

“Power of the people”/ “Rule by the people”

- ✓ Democracy is a system of government of a country whose leaders have been elected by the people; therefore the power is with the people.
- ✓ This happens through the process of free and fair elections so the people can give their opinions about issues occurring in their communities.
